

Dear Friends of Second Church,

This weekend, the Jewish community will begin its observance of the High Holy Days, a time of reflection and restoration as the New Year begins.

And I have to agree that, each year as harvest time approaches and a new school year begins, I feel much more attentive to the whole notion of starting all over than it seems like I ever do in January.

I mean, after the great festivity and beauty of the Christmas season, what's left to say, at least for awhile?

January feels like a moment to hunker down or hole up. Reflecting? Not so much.

Maybe it's different for you, and you find illumination and resolve in crafting your New Year's resolutions. If so, that's wonderful.

Maybe the calendar you follow most closely is not the school calendar, or the Gregorian calendar, or even the Fiscal Year of a business, but something else entirely.

However you mark the passing of your days, there is wisdom to reflecting as an old year winds down and another begins, and asking ourselves what it is we must make sure what to leave in the past and what to carry with us into the future.

So often, it is only when we look back that we realize the particular moments when God's presence and care were strongest—and the direction in which we are being led becomes clear.

Whenever it seems like the right moment to take that look, it is vital that we do it.
